

Joy Walton

I came from London to live in Debenham, 35 years ago. I feel fortunate to be part of a community of resourceful, compassionate people, for whom the Debenham Project makes sense.

I trained as a textile designer, followed by a career in education, in Secondary and Primary schools, in London and Suffolk with specific interest in Personal, Social and Health Education, Citizenship, Art and Design Technology.

My husband Tony and I have been involved in the Debenham Project from the start. Our experience supporting my Mum, who had Parkinson Disease, and my Dad and Mother-in-law with dementia, was intense. If we can, we hope to offer support to someone else in a similar situation.
